What was asked

“Sarah's got the flu and she's out all week. Tom says he'll take every extra shift going, he's saving for a deposit. Sort it out.” (from Gráinne)

Noted as facts before the AI started: Sarah can't work all week: Off sick (flu) all week.

Every try the AI made, and what her rules said

Try	Max 40 hours a week (Code)	Minimum 11 hours between shifts (Code)	Minimum staff while open, three on Saturday mornings (Code)	Coffee machine cover, every open hour (Code)	Never roster someone on a day they've said they can't work (Code)	Share weekend shifts fairly (AI judge)
1 9 changes Sent back	Broken: Tom Kavanagh would work 48 hours. Your limit is 40 hours. (+1 more)	Broken: Tom Kavanagh would have only 10 hours between finishing on Thursday and starting on Friday. Your minimum is 11 hours. (+1 more)	Broken: On Wednesday 28 October, from 7 am to 12:30 pm, Only one person is on duty. Your minimum for that time is two people.	Kept	Kept	Not asked: code failed first
2 14 changes Passed	Kept	Kept	Kept	Kept	Kept	Kept: Weekend shifts are spread fairly: the team averages 3.0 of 8 weekend days over the last four weeks, with most people between 3 and 4, and Sarah's 0 matches her request to be off weekends until Christmas.

Approval

Gráinne approved try 2 on 29 Oct 2026, 11:27. Approving re-ran every code check before anything was written; the AI judge's verdict was taken from the gate run.

The rules in force, and how each was proven before it guarded anything

Rule	In her words	Checked by	Right on her examples
Max 40 hours a week	Forty is the most, full stop. Anything over forty is a no, and breaks count in the hours. Even if someone's out sick, I'd rather be short than have someone burnt out.	Code	8 of 8
Minimum 11 hours between shifts	Anyone who finishes a shift needs at least eleven hours before their next one starts. Ten hours is too short, and I'd rather be short on the floor than have someone come in exhausted.	Code	8 of 8
Minimum staff while open, three on Saturday mornings	Never fewer than two people on the floor the whole time we're open, kitchen counts too. Saturday eight to noon is the rush, so three in, every Saturday.	Code	8 of 8
Coffee machine cover, every open hour	Someone trained on the coffee machine has to be on the whole time we're open, seven in the morning till eight at night, with no gaps. Not even on a quiet afternoon or when someone's off sick.	Code	8 of 8
Never roster someone on a day they've said they can't work	If someone's told me they can't do a day, they don't go on it, not even for an hour. No 'just this once'. Regular or one-off, same rule.	Code	8 of 8
Share weekend shifts fairly	Nobody should be stuck carrying most of the weekends while others get none. If someone's done a lot lately, they get a break. Someone who asks for extra weekends themselves is fine, but I still keep an eye on the total.	AI judge	6 of 6

Controls

The AI that drafts the rota has read-only tools and is never given the owner's rules; it only hears what broke. Each code check was written by Claude from the owner's interview, type-checked and run in a sandbox (no file, network or system access, one-second limit). Code checks run first; the AI judge is asked only once they all pass, and is labelled as AI. Only the owner's Approve writes a rota, and it re-runs the code checks before writing.
